Hundreds At Opening Of Annual Hotel Show

AN OVERFLOW crowd yesterday jammed the ballroom of the Penn-Stroud Hotel for a kickoff dinner which inaugurated the 11th annual Pocono Mountains Hotel and Restaurant Show.

Scheduled for the hotel's main ballroom, the crowd overflowed into an adjoining dining room. Attendance was estimated at 300 persons.

An equally enthusiastic group toured the 70 exhibits in the hotel's exhibition hall, following the formal opening of the show. It was estimated at 1,300 persons.

As is usual, a semi-carnival atmosphere pervaded the premises.

Old acquaintances paused to swap reminiscences with friends. New friendships were made. There was a smile for everyone from exhibitors and sightseers alike.

The displays, also as usual, ranged from cash registers to bedroom suites, from beer and liquor to paint and paper, from hot dogs to the most exotic dishes.

There were all kinds of souvenirs—yard sticks, bottle openers, key chains, pencils, brochures.

There was free food and drink, ranging from cokes and hot chocolate to pizza, ham and hors d'oeuvres.

The show was open for three hours after the formal opening—until 11 p. m.

Today, hours will be from 2 to 10 p. m. Tomorrow, the exhibit will be open from 2 to 6 p. m.

Today's program will be highlighted by a panel discussion at 4 p. m. under direction of Dr. S. Earl Thompson, head of the department of hotel and institution administration of the Pennsylvania State University. It will be held in the hotel ballroom.

Featuring tomorrow's program will be a fashion show and luncheon starting at noon.

Also scheduled for today are a cocktail hour at 6 p. m. and a Dutch treat dinner at 7 o'clock.

The show is sponsored jointly by the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau and the Northeastern Pennsylvania Hotel Assn.

Admittance is limited to invited guests including resort owners, hotel managers, cottage colony and motel operators, restaurateurs, camp directors, institutional managers, tavern owners and others in the resort or restaurant business.

Pari-Mutuel Issue Still Alive

By Robert Stewart
AN unintentional discrepancy in the filing of vote counts with the County Commissioners following the Primary Election April 26 may yet bring harness racing to Monroe County.

The commissioners were informed yesterday that from East Stroudsburg's First Ward, the tally sheet submitted had only the serial number of the voting machine, plus the count for candidates listed, while the yes and no votes for the racing question were not given.

Total vote—given by phone by a member of the ward's Board of Elections following the closing of the polling place April 26—was 101 votes for racing and 175 votes against. This vote total, however, cannot be construed as being official. For a re-canvass of the vote in the ward, the commissioners, sitting as an election board for the county, will open the machine Friday at 9:30 a. m.—one-half hour before the official count is scheduled to be announced for the entire county.

Yet to be counted are the absentee and military ballots. They will be tabulated Friday and included in the official total count.

The commissioners explained that these ballots could upset the election if a substantial majority of the absentee votes favor race track betting and it was also found that the First Ward voting machine showed no record of votes cast on the official tally sheet.

Since the county election board similarly showed no vote, the referendum in that ward could not be counted in the official returns, the board explained.

The absentee vote will number 39 ballots at the most, according to officials.

The issue began when the commissioners, in receiving their unofficial return from the Ward, on Election night, saw no entries for the question of racing.

When the official return was opened last Friday at the beginning of the vote tally, this also showed no entries for the pari-mutuel question.

One other copy of the sheet, which had been posted on the door of the polling place, had disappeared when the board returned to check their totals.

Should under any circumstances, the votes telephoned to the commissioners' office be disqualified following the examination of the machine Friday, then the absentee and military ballot count—based on the fact there would be only a four-vote difference against racing—could admit racing to the county.

While there are no official parties involved in the controversy—since only two non-party groups espoused, or urged the defeat of, the measure—County Solicitor Leo Achtermann urged the commissioners to inform the County Ministerium and the Vacation Bureau of the re-canvass to be held in the event either group would desire to have their respective attorneys present when the machine is opened.

Achtermann explained that no committee had filed papers with the commissioners' office prior to the election denoting they were for or against racing. The commissioners, in talking to the ward's Election Board yesterday, stressed that they feel it was strictly an unintentional error in computation and was not committed with the view of tampering with the vote.

Should the matter need further clarification, the next unit to pass a decision upon the matter would be Monroe County Court.

The Paradise Township return, for which there had been some question following the election, was announced to have been cleared up at yesterday's Commissioners' meeting.

Law Permits More Than Four Tracks

HARRISBURG (AP)—The majority of the State Harness Racing Commission expressed the opinion Monday that more than four tracks could be opened to pari-mutuel betting under the new harness racing law.

"There's no limitation on the number of tracks," said Edward J. Kane, Philadelphia.

Chairman Lawrence B. Sheppard said it was "technically correct" to say it would be possible to open a track in each of the six counties which approved pari-mutuel betting at harness races at last Tuesday's primary election.

Churches Agree

The interpretation drew support from the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, which led the fight against the gambling referendum last week.

"As far as a strict interpretation of the law is concerned, this is true," agreed the Rev. George I. Evans, head of the council's division of social relations. He added:

"The legislators were interpreting it generally as four tracks; but this was thrown together in such haste and pushed through with such lightning speed that nobody had a chance to sit down and study it."

The new law, passed by the 1959 Legislature, stipulates that only four corporations may be licensed to operate pari-mutuel plants.

Limit on Corporations

Each corporation is limited to 50 days of racing.

These provisions have been interpreted by some persons to imply a limit of four tracks.

Sheppard has said in the past that the principal question is not one of the number of tracks allowed, but the number of tracks the state can support.

Harry L. Ross of Philadelphia, deputy attorney general assigned to the commission, said the legal question "really hasn't been taken under consideration." Commissioner Martin F. Cusick of Shippensburg agreed that the issue has not yet been settled.

The opinions were expressed at an impromptu news conference following Monday's meeting of the commission.

No Applications

Sheppard said no applications have been received as yet for the corporation licenses but that five requests for application forms have been received.

These were from Emanuel Krus and M. David Smeltz, Harrisburg attorneys representing Concord Raceway, Inc., of Delaware County; Mrs. Katherine Walenista, Forty Fort, for the Northeastern Raceway Corp., Luzerne County; W. Ken Duffy, Harrisburg attorney, for the Luzerne Trotting Park Assn., Luzerne County; John Mazur, Mount Carmel, Northumberland County, and John Grier Bartol Jr., Philadelphia attorney, for an unnamed Chester County group.

Bartol would not identify the group he represented. "It is possible that this group, after investigation, may not make any application at all," he said.

Mazur, chairman of the Young Democrats of Northumberland County, said he picked up the form for Atty. Steve Pokdemba of Mount Carmel, who is attempting to form a corporation there. Mazur works in the State Revenue Department.

Six Approved

Bucks, Delaware, Chester, Luzerne, Northumberland and Philadelphia counties approved pari-mutuel plants at last week's primary. Eight other counties rejected the question.

'Shame' To Chessman Killing

Europe Reacts Against Execution

LONDON (AP)—Europe recoiled with cries of "shame" Monday night over the execution of Caryl Chessman.

Newspapers, prominent figures and ordinary people spoke of the convict's death in the gas chamber in California in terms such as "appalling penalty" and "monstrous deed."

Some said it would hurt the prestige of the United States abroad. A minority supported execution.

Afternoon newspapers in some cities rushed extras to the streets when the word was flashed of Chessman's death. Radio stations broke into programs for bulletins.

The London Daily Herald, in an editorial for its paper Tuesday, said, "There must be in the hearts of most honest-to-goodness Americans great shame over the execution of Caryl Chessman."

"To add to this appalling penalty 12 years of indescribable mental agony is something which could never happen in Britain and which right-minded people in the States must make sure can never happen again," the Express added.

In Paris, Mme. George Vienne, president of the French Assn. Against the Death Penalty, said the execution was "one of the most ignominious crimes that the new world has ever committed. The civilized old world will never forgive it."

Paris afternoon papers quickly sent late editions to the streets. One paper, Paris-Presse, printed a page one box in four columns giving pro and con arguments in the case.

In Italy and Belgium, the general reaction was one of shock. Italian newspapers and most Italians felt that Chessman's 12 years in death row was sufficient punishment. Italy does not have the death penalty.

Crowds in Rome milled about newsstands to grab up copies of extra editions and engage in animated conversation about the execution.

"I always like Americans," said a plumber, "but this time I am all out against them. What they did is pure murder."

Maintains Innocence Up To End

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—Caryl Chessman's 12-year fight for life on death row ended in 10 swift minutes Monday in the gas chamber, where he died smiling at a red-haired woman.

The last words of the condemned sex criminal and convict-author, lip-read through the gas chamber windows by the closest of 60 witnesses outside, were in farewell to another woman, one of his lawyers.

Before the 38-year-old prisoner took the last 13 steps into the death chamber, he told Warden Fred Dickson he was not the red-light hand that forced two women out of cars in Los Angeles lovers' lanes in 1948 and made them perform acts of sex perversion.

Eight Steps

These crimes, held to be kidnapping for robbery with bodily harm, touched off a criminal case which grew to have worldwide interest, as Chessman eight times won stays of execution.

Within minutes before the fatal potassium cyanide pellets dropped into acid in the gas chamber, Chessman lost three final appeals and missed a chance for a brief stay because a federal judge's secretary at first dialed a wrong number.

The California Supreme Court which had three times voted against executive clemency, turned down two appeals in San Francisco Monday morning, and U.S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas in Washington also refused to intervene. Chessman's lawyer contended he could show that someone else committed the crimes.

Clark replied that such plugs were common in the broadcasting industry and said he believed the American Broadcasting Co. had given him specific approval for what he did.

Clark said the plug was to the effect that transportation for guests on his American bandstand show was provided by American Airlines. Questioned, he said he wasn't sure whether American actually flew the guests, or just arranged their flights.

When Moss said the idea was just to get the airline mentioned, Clark agreed with a "yes, sir."

Call Too Late

U.S. Dist. Judge Louis E. Goodman in San Francisco attempted to order a 30-minute stay to hear another writ, but the gas reaction had begun before his telephone call got through to the prison.

Linked by a direct phone line, Cecil Poole, the governor's clemency secretary, said in Sacramento he heard a phone ring and a voice saying it was Judge Goodman.

"Has this started?" the judge asked.

"Yes, it has, judge. It's too late," replied Louis S. Nelson, associate warden, over a telephone just outside the gas chamber.

At 10 a. m. four guards escorted the black-haired, hawk-faced Chessman into the octagonal green chamber.

As they strapped him into one of the two metal chairs at 10:02 a. m. he spotted Eleanor Garner Black among the 60 witnesses jammed outside.

"Tell Rosalie goodbye," the judge asked.

"Yes, it has, judge. It's too late," replied Louis S. Nelson, associate warden, over a telephone just outside the gas chamber.

Turkish Riots Continue

Students, Troops Clash

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP)—Turkish students clashed twice with troops Monday in anti-government demonstrations staged with an eye on the Istanbul meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization foreign ministers. A group of lawyers joined the freedom campaign.

Turkish infantrymen, operating under martial law, broke up the outbursts against Premier Adnan Menderes' regime—one by a group of 3,000 within sight of the new City Hall that is the NATO conference site. Scores were arrested.

"Freedom! Freedom!" was the marching cry of the demonstrators, who defied both orders against public assemblies, and a government threat that arms would be used against any further disorders in the five-day old movement against Menderes.

The soldiers did not fire. However, they used rifle butts, muscle power and threat of bayonets to disperse the masses and nab the more obstreperous demonstrators.

Two spotter planes and a helicopter helped them keep a check on the streets.

Students protesting Menderes' rule and military forces met at a broad plaza near City Hall in the opening incident of the day.

Officials and newsmen on hand for the NATO session watched from windows. Turkish residents watched from ramshackle houses in a dusty, ancient quarter across the way.

Later, 500 students marched silently down the city's main business street, toward the site of a monument to Turkey's war dead in Taksim Square.

They never reached the square. A ring of troops met the students and pushed them into side streets.

Rehearsal Staged For Royal Wedding

LONDON (AP)—A school teacher's wife stood in for Princess Margaret Monday night at a rehearsal for the royal wedding Friday.

Mrs. Frank Kilvington stood before the high altar of Westminster Abbey at the spot where Margaret will become the wife of Antony Armstrong-Jones.

Her husband, a teacher at nearby Westminster School, acted the role of Prince Philip, the duke of Edinburgh, in giving away the bride. The Kilvingtons are friends of the royal family.

"It was for the benefit of the choir and the staff and lasted about 90 minutes," said the abbey preceptor, the Rev. C.T.H. Dams.

The best man, Dr. Roger Giliatt, also took part in the rehearsal.

The big practice run comes on Thursday when Margaret and Antony rehearse in person.

The big topic in the meantime was—will Armstrong-Jones have a stag party?

His future brother-in-law, the Duke of Edinburgh, had a merry fling on the eve of his marriage to the now Queen Elizabeth II.

But no one was talking about a stag for the ex-phlographer of London's elite.

A spokesman at Clarence House, Margaret's London home, said: "Sorry, no comment. That would be a private matter."

The Buckingham Palace social calendar shows Thursday to be a royal night off. Presumably Tony could get away for the bridegroom's traditional last final fling with the boys.

300 Students Enter Math Tournament

Three hundred students from the county's schools are entered in the tournament.

The tournament is composed of six divisions: arithmetic, general mathematics, algebra I, plane geometry, algebra II, and comprehensive mathematics.

Students enrolled in the different divisions must be completing the course this year and have not had any higher mathematics.

Time allowed for each test will be one hour.

Dear Abby

Play The Game, Gal

Dear Abby: My husband has personality plus. All the women make a fuss over him and he eats it up. He's a good-looking and doesn't show his age (49). I am 47 and nothing special. Albert bowls with a mixed group from work. I can't bowl because I have a bad back. The bowlers had their pictures taken in a group. Wives with husbands, friends with friends, etc. But Albert was the only one in the picture holding a girl (young, pretty and single) on his lap. This picture got in the local paper, and the bowling alley even put it up on the bulletin board. Everyone I know saw the picture and laughed about it. Plenty of remarks were passed. How would you take this, Abby?

BOWLER'S WIFE

Dear Wife: I'd try to take it like a good sport. Your husband is at the dangerous age. Help him stay out of trouble by keeping an eye on him. If he needs constant reassurance that he's desirable — reassure him. If you can't bowl go along and keep score. (At least that way you'll know what the score is.)

Dear Abby: Please tell me what to do. A few months ago I met a young man and I like him very much. Whenever we go out to eat, as soon as the meal is over, out comes a toothpick. None of my friends or any of my family use toothpicks in public, Abby, and this disturbs me. I've seen many a glance cast his way and, naturally, I am embarrassed. He is a nice person, but I can't stand those toothpicks. Should I mention it to him? EVIE

Dear Evie: If you like him and expect to see more of him, tell him in a nice way that the toothpick-in-public bit won't do. If he doesn't accept your constructive criticism like a gentleman — lose him. He will have revealed a more serious fault.

Dear Abby: I am one of four children. Ellen is 17, Muriel is 15 and I am Shirley, 13. Our baby brother is 3 and he is our problem. Our mother tells everybody that she has three built-in baby-sitters and she means it, too. She doesn't realize that we girls have things to do and can't be chasing after the baby every evening after school and on weekends. We can't make any plans because she depends on us to watch the baby. Don't you think she could hire a sitter and let us live our own lives? If she paid us the regular sitters' rate we wouldn't mind helping her out.

BUILT-IN SITTERS

Dear Built: Come now . . . with three young ladies in the home your mother shouldn't have to hire sitters. Surely each of you is able to help out once or twice a week. The experience will come in handy. And it should be a privilege to repay your mother for the hundreds of little favors she has done for you. Shame on you!

P.S. And if your sisters feel the same — triple shame!

Civil Defense Alert On Today

A STATEWIDE Civil Defense test will be held today and will be divided into two parts, C. Marshal Reese, County Civil Defense director has announced.

The first part of the test will be from 2 to 2:30 p.m. and will be a combined Conelrad test and public participation drill.

The Conelrad test will run from 2 to 2:30 p.m. and all non-Conelrad AM and FM stations, together with all television stations will cease broadcasting.

During the public participation phase of the test, each local director will take steps to sound signals starting at 2 p.m. with a long, steady alert signal.

At 2:15 p.m. the wailing or warbling take cover signal will be heard, and all persons will take cover and all traffic will stop moving.

At 2:27 p.m. a long, steady alert signal will sound once more and pedestrians and traffic will be allowed to move once again.

During the later part of the drill, for the benefit of the Civil Defense unit only, a sealed envelope will be opened by the local unit, and will contain instructions and problems to be solved by the group.

Any persons having questions concerning the drill are asked to contact Mrs. Kathryn Miller at Civil Defense.

Sirens will wail throughout the Commonwealth as Pennsylvania takes part in a national test of civil defense preparations.

Dr. Richard Gerstell, state civil defense director, has urged all Pennsylvanians to participate wholeheartedly in the drill.

"With the exact test times already known, there is no valid reason why our state should come up with anything less than a perfect showing," Gerstell said.

The results of the public drill and organization exercises will be evaluated in area meetings later in the week. Critiques will be held in Lehigh, Wednesday; in Selinsgrove, Thursday, and in Kittanning, Friday.

Kranendonk started singing professionally in the male choir of the St. James Episcopal Church in New York City at the age of eleven. He was graduated from Hope College, Holland, Michigan, with a Bachelor of Music degree, and has continued his post graduate work at Columbia University.

Of the eight years during which he has been on the road with various musical organizations five of them have been spent with the Pennsylvanians. He has had extensive experience in the field of entertainment, including radio, television, night clubs, and the concert stage. Many listeners may remember his father, Leonard Kranendonk, as the guest soloist for the choral concert several years ago.

Zellner In Bandmasters

ROBERT Zellner, director of the East Stroudsburg High School Band, was recently elected to membership in the Pennsylvania Bandmasters Association at their convention in Bethlehem.

Zellner reported that initial preparations were made for a state-wide contest to be conducted this fall among high school musicians.

The contest will name the outstanding musician of the state and will begin on a district basis.

Robert Kranendonk, baritone soloist, formerly with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, and currently Educational and Sales representative for Shawnee Press.

Accompanied by the band ensemble, "Bob" will sing "With a Song in My Heart", from the Rodgers and Hart show, "Spring Is Here"; "So in Love", from "Kiss Me Kate", by Cole Porter; and an operatic aria from "Faust", "Dio Possente", by Gounod. His concluding number, "Happy Wanderer", is one he helped popularize while with the Waring organization.

PM Jaycees Endorse Johnson

Johnson has been active on the state level for the past six years and is well known in the Jaycee circles.

Scott D. Straub and Russell Irwin have been elected to direct Johnson's campaign.

Straub said last night, "Johnson has been engaged as speaker at several Jaycee meetings

William D. Johnson in the state and will talk on various Jaycee subjects."

Straub added, "In the office of Executive Vice President, Johnson will direct the activities of all traveling officers and he (Johnson) has held all of them in the past six years and knows the problem that confronts these officers."

"He has definite ideas on how to correct the problems and improve the effectiveness of the office."

With the convention convening in Philadelphia on May 6, Johnson's campaign will revolve on the "Service to the local chapters."

Johnson feels that more good can be done if local chapters and state can get closer together.

Straub said, "There will be nine members going to the convention and plans call for hard work to get Johnson elected to the second highest office in the state."

and in condensed form, was taped by Madalyn Maloney for today's Wyckoff quarter hour show.

Johnson Pleads Guilty, Sentenced On 8 Counts

LAWRENCE JOHNSON, 23, of 601 Ann St., Stroudsburg, pleaded guilty to eight counts of burglary in Monroe County Criminal Court yesterday and was sentenced to seven and one-half to 23 months in jail on each charge.

Judge Fred W. Davis directed that the sentences run concurrently from Dec. 11, 1959, when he was brought here. He was also fined $100 and costs on each charge. He was represented by Maxwell H. Cohen, court-appointed attorney.

Johnson was charged with burglaries at Leggieri's Pizzeria, 301 N. Ninth St.; Daubert's Richfield Service Station, 103 Park Ave.; Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2540; Pocono Bowling Center, 18 N. Sixth St.; the office of Citizens Gas Co., 12 S. Seventh St.; Bessecker's Diner, N. Ninth St.; Happy Hour Tavern, Park Ave., and Wyckoff's Dept. Store.

Police said he also admitted burglaries in Columbia and Delaware, N.J., and Portland.

Judge Davis deferred sentencing of Kenneth Henry Shafer, 45, East Stroudsburg, who pleaded guilty to six counts of sodomy involving teen-age boys. J. Joseph McCluskey, representing Shafer, asked the court to provide mental treatment for him and Judge Davis directed McCluskey to see what arrangements could be made for such treatment.

John J. Sullivan, charged with assault and battery, pleaded guilty and was fined $500 and costs and placed on probation for 23 months. Horace Labadie, who also pleaded guilty to assault and battery, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to a year in jail.

The case of Michael M. Mulligan, Jr., 119 E. 91st St., New York City, charged with reckless driving, was placed on the argument list for the first Monday in June after Walter Olenick, his attorney, filed a motion to quash the indictment.

Austin Coco, Sr., charged with non-support, was directed to pay $15 weekly for support of his two children and costs. Joseph W. Murray, charged with non-support, had his case continued to the second Monday of September.

Franklin Bush, Sr., charged with non-support, was directed to pay $7.50 a week for support of his son as the result of an agreement of the parties.

Jacob Seip, charged with failure to stop at a stop sign, failed to appear in court and his $100 bond was ordered forfeited by Judge Davis.

Sound Fiscal Policies

During the coming months, as we approach the General Election, we'll be hearing lots of promises about what this candidate or that candidate will do for us once he is elected to high office.

And, in the meantime, we'll be able to observe what Congress and the Legislature do in respect to legislation and appropriation measures affecting all types of programs and projects.

Whether the appeal for votes is on a county, state or national level, it might be well for the voters to heed the call sounded by Charles R. Sligh Jr., executive vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

In a speech at Baltimore last week, Mr. Sligh urged Americans to assert a greater voice in the political affairs of the nation to bring a return to "common-sense" government.

The good citizen, he said, first of all must inform himself on the issues. Then he must find out how the available candidates stand on those issues.

In calling for the election of candidates who will fight for sound fiscal policies, Mr. Sligh pointed out that the child born today, who has yet to receive a single "benefit" from our government, already owes more than $5,000 as his share of federal obligations already in existence.

"He will begin paying that debt the moment he goes to work on his first job, and he will pay it all his life in addition to current costs of government," the speaker declared.

In a final plea, Mr. Sligh said: "Politics is not all black or white; there are many shades of gray. But we can restore common-sense to government by voting for the sensible and sound men in both parties."

We heartily agree with his comments and recommend them to the voter.

Training For Jobs

Pennsylvania's newly-created Committee on Education has been committed by Gov. Lawrence to "translate money into human power." It will have to find out how much the state can spend and just how much education the people can get for each tax dollar.

The committee goes to work at a time when Pennsylvania faces an educational crisis. It is confronted with the problems of record numbers of students, of demands for a higher level of learning, and improvements in teaching methods and supervision.

As Gov. Lawrence points out, economic development goes hand-in-hand with educational progress. Education provides brain power to develop industry; industry produces the money for education.

And while the committee is studying the situation, we hope it will give deep thought to establishing more vocational schools in Pennsylvania.

The Pennsylvania Story

Democrats Concerned

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Post-mortems of the primary election of the past week in Pennsylvania are assuming a somewhat hushed tone from that marking the hasty following of the run-off.

Pennsylvania Democrats for example apparently do not have as much to be thankful for as they at first piped over their public address system.

Uprisings within organization ranks in several county-level contests now appear to have more significance than at first conceded. In almost too many instances, "organization-backed" candidates lost their contests.

The undercurrents expressed via primary opposition are in many cases, of concern privately — notwithstanding hearty public utterances of "sporting" and "healthy party mixing" on the part of some of the more ebullient members of the party hierarchy.

Pennsylvania donkey riders since their bluish success in 1954 when a Democratic Governor for the first time in 16 years was unexpectedly bounced on the scene, last week failed to score — for the first time — an outstanding progressive step forward in the election returns, outstanding step forward in the election returns.

Is it the beginning of a downward trend for Pennsylvania Democrats after six years of answer? No one knows the answer at this point — but to many the indications are there. The November general election will provide a more specific answer.

A point of diminishing return ultimately is reached by every political organization — a point where their newness of success begins to wear down, where ascendancy slides to a halt, where the cycle begins its reverse trend.

Have Pennsylvania Democrats reached this point yet? It is not likely. The past primary seemingly indicated more than anything else though that the leveling off point — not sharp decline — may be in the offing. Primary elections, such as last week's run-off are not designed to show party strength — that is, as one party opposed to another. Primaries as a by-product of times do show degree of party unity, esprit de corps within rank and file, plus a rough score card of what might be expected in the general election to follow.

The past primary differed somewhat from this usual pattern in that in two congressional districts, successors were elected to fill unexpired terms of congressmen who died in office.

One of these elections — that covering the 17th District, embracing Bradford, Cameron, Clinton, Columbia, Lycoming, Montour, Potter and Tioga counties — was unique in this particular respect:

Here was a district that Pennsylvania — and Washingtonian — Democratic leaders felt sure they could swing into the donkey rider column. Into the Democratic campaign went everything including the proverbial kitchen sink.

A few days before the primary Governor Lawrence hot-footed into the area to stump in behalf of Democratic Candidate Dean R. Fisher. In behind-the-scenes activity, Democrats nationally poured on the campaign oil, well aided by every assistance possible from pro-Democratic organized labor.

This was the big push of the primary for Democrats. And yet — Mr. Fisher lost the election of Republican newcomer Herman T. Schneebell. The vote, according to unofficial returns: 41,155 to 40,693, or an edge for Republican Schneebell of only 3,462, of 84,848 votes cast.

The word "only" is used for this reason: back in 1956 when Mr. Fisher opposed the then Alvin R. Bush, he lost by a margin of 21,848 votes — out of a total of 127,648 cast that year.

Curiously — Democrats felt they had the 17th District sewed up this year while quaking Republicans felt they would be fortunate to win by a thousand votes. The final outcome upset both appreciably!

Korean Horror

The story of Korea is sad. For 3,000 years its history is authentic. It is a mountainous country, surrounded by Russia and China and across the sea by Japan. The Chinese Three Eastern Provinces (Manchuria) lie directly to the west.

There are many theories as to the origin of the Korean people. Undoubtedly they are Mongoloid rather than Malayan, but beyond that too much is guessing. The Korean language seems to be closer to Japanese than to Chinese.

As far back as history goes, Korea was invaded by Chinese or was fighting for its freedom from China. It might be said that whenever China was strong, Korea was its vassal.

The earliest relations of Japan and Korea lie in a mist of superstition and tradition, but the record is clear that in the year 200 A.D. a Japanese force successfully invaded Korea. This opened the road to a two way traffic between the two countries and it also made China known to Japan and vice versa.

Whereas China was an enormous country and Japan was guarded by the sea, Korea was beset by enemies. Such tribes as the Khitans and Mongols from Manchuria and Siberia invaded China but also moved into Korea. Genghis Khan and his grandson, Kublai Khan, moved in upon Korea, which became a vassal of the Mongols.

It was after the downfall of the Mongols that the Koreans called their country Chosen, an ancient name still in use. China re-emerged into the glories of the Ming Dynasty, a period of great progress in all cultural fields and this had a tremendous influence upon Korea.

Perhaps the most serious influence upon Korean history — was the invasion of Korea by Hideyoshi, Regent of Japan. Rising from the lowliest station, he sought to make himself the conqueror of as much of Asia as he knew about and his first objective was Korea as a stepping stone for the conquest of China.

In May, 1952, Hideyoshi, who had mastered Japan, set out on his Napoleonic expedition to conquer first Korea and then China. He was a man of enormous ability, but he failed to realize that no country in the world, not even Switzerland or Japan, is as suited for guerrilla warfare as Korea.

It was in this expedition that one of Syngman Rhee's ancestors, Ri Chosen, invented a cannon whose shell really could go through rock and iron.

Although Korea won this war, the country was practically destroyed. The fighting had been on Korean soil and the people suffered frightfully. Korea's Chinese allies became a scourge. For 230 years subsequent to the defeat of Hideyoshi, Korea was isolated from both Japan and China, although each year tribute was sent to China.

Even during the period of isolation, European ships appeared in Korean waters and some French missionaries and Dutch merchants even landed, but they were not welcomed and some were persecuted. It was during the period in the 19th Century that China and Russia vied for suzerainty over Korea; the Russians, however, made little progress.

After the Meiji Revolution of 1868 in Japan, that country again turned its eyes toward Korea and for a time Korea was squeezed among China, Japan and Russia until the Sino-Japanese War in 1894-5, fought in Manchuria, so weakened China as to leave only Japan and Russia in the field.

Korea became completely independent of China but that did not mean that either Russia or Japan would not seize Korea if possible.

The Russo-Japanese War in 1904-5 settled the issue. Russia was defeated and Japan established a protectorate over Korea. In 1910, the protectorate was abolished and Korea was incorporated within the Japanese Empire.

Japan controlled Korea until 1945 when that country fell to the United States and Soviet Russia. Thus North Korea, a Soviet country, and South Korea, a democracy within the United Nations, came into existence.

In June, 1950, war broke out between North and South Korea with Chinese Communist intervention to complicate the situation. The United Nations sent an expeditionary force under General Douglas MacArthur to assist President Syngman Rhee but this force failed because it was not permitted by Washington to win a victory.

As a matter of fact, when General MacArthur, after a long and courageous career as an American soldier, protested against the ugliness of fighting for defeat, he was miserably dismissed.

Since then, Syngman Rhee, as President of Korea, has prevented the Chinese Communists and the Russians from conquering his country.

Social Security Guide

Q. As a result of injuries received in an auto accident last October, I will be completely paralyzed for life. I was 42 years old last month. Am I eligible to receive social security disability benefits now?

A. No. The law provides that disability benefits are payable to disabled persons age 50 to 65. However, contact your social security office at once regarding a disability freeze. This will protect your earnings record and make possible the payment of benefits to you when you reach age 50.

Q. I am completely disabled and only 29 years of age. I understand I cannot be paid disability benefits until I am 50 years old. I have heard that I should apply for a "disability freeze". Why?

A. It is extremely important that you apply for a disability freeze, because this is the only way you can assure that benefits payable to you and/or your family in the future will not be lowered or forfeited entirely because you are unable to work any more.

Q. I will reach age 52 this month and have been unable to work for the past 10 months because of a disability which my doctor tells me will prevent me from ever working again. A friend of mine tells me I should contact social security to freeze my wage record. Is this right?

A. Not exactly. However, you should contact the social security district office nearest your home at once. Your application will be taken, and if you qualify, you will be paid monthly disability benefits beginning with the 7th month after the month in which you became disabled. The disability freeze of which you speak is applicable in the cases of disabled persons under age 50.

Q. How do I get the report form?

A. A report form will be mailed to you at the end of the year if you have reported your earnings promptly as required. If you do not receive a report form in the mail, you may obtain one from any social security district office.

Off The Record

By Robert Clark, City Editor

Class will tell. Talented and volcanic-like Karen Roth told it in professional terms the other night when she guided Jabberwock to a successful one-night run at East Stroudsburg State College.

Mrs. Roth, a pro of the old school gave the assembled a real lesson in stage personality and poise as she paced her way through a nostalgic comedian type number of the old timers of bygone days.

Karen also tripped and sang her way around the world in a second number which brought out the voice that had entertained thousands at the Palace Theatre, Met and other high spots of top billing.

The YMCA's benefit show was a night of good entertainment. Built around many persons who were enjoying their first baptism of stage fire, the performance thoroughly amused the onlookers from start to finish.

One standout, especially, aside Mrs. Roth, was an electric guitar artist by the name of Raoul Longworth. His professional touch of the strings was worthy of the price of admission alone.

There were others who gave the attendees a blend of these plus the "old pro" techniques of Mrs. Roth and Longworth gave the attendees a wholesome evening of entertainment.

There were many behind the scenes workers who helped make the affair a social as well as a financial success. Individuals like Jack (Pierpoint) Haswell, the self-tagged sugar-daddy of the show helped put the $2,000 goal mintrel-like show over.

Haswell served as general chairman and wound up his duties with a typical Broadway bow by having his young daughter present roses to Mrs. Roth at the final curtain call.

A report is circulating that the show will be repeated at a later date. We hope so because all of the community deserves to see the efficient performances of local stage personalities.

Inside Washington

Ike's Last Chance To Wage Peace

Washington — The capital is in the throes of what can only be described as pre-summit fever. The air is filled with anticipation of a big contest, somewhat like those few moments before a heavyweight title bout.

Administration officials are busier, more harried — and they are growing somewhat impatient with reporters who themselves are preparing for the big event in Paris in mid-May.

Officially, the line is to play down the possibility of reaching agreements to ease cold war tensions. However, President Eisenhower's top aides cannot lose sight of the fact that it is the Chief Executive's last chance to make a contribution to peace, his primary aim for all his years in the White House.

Under Eisenhower's leadership, his foreign policy and defense lieutenants have worked long to hammer out a series of proposals which they hope will be met at least part way by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. Just one concrete step toward peace is all they want — and secretly, they hope to get it.

In preparing for the summit, the President is not even thinking in terms of domestic politics. But, inevitably in an election year, there will be political repercussions — good or bad — as a result of what transpires in Paris.

A modicum of success could give the Republican party a big and much needed boost with the voters; complete failure would rebound to the benefit of the Democrats.

On Capitol Hill, events are being watched closely, although it must be said that no one in either party has shown the slightest evidence of thinking about the summit meeting along partisan political lines.

The Allen-Scott Report

Will Ike See Zhukov?

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — President Eisenhower is still awaiting a reply to a request that apparently is proving very difficult to answer.

In the range of the matter being held for his trip to Russia in June, the President asked that his elaborate schedule include time for a visit with his World War II friend, Marshal Georgi Zhukov.

So far the only response to that has been stony silence — official and otherwise.

The request was communicated through regular diplomatic channels. Ambassador Llew-lyn Thompson informed the Soviet Foreign Office that the President hoped to have the opportunity to see his one-time comrade-in-arms "on purely personal grounds."

The Kremlin has reacted as if the proposal had never been made, despite several pointed follow-ups by Ambassador Thompson.

State Department authorities are intimating the President may do some prodding himself at the summit conference in Paris this month. According to these insiders, he may take up the matter directly with Khrushchev.

A few years ago the Kremlin ruler was very eager to make the most of Zhukov's friendship with the President.

In 1955, Zhukov accompanied Khrushchev to the summit conference in Geneva, and had a widely-publicized "reunion" with the President. They exchanged gifts for their families, and the President invited the Soviet battle commander to visit the U.S. This was the second time the President had done that. And I like the first, nothing came of it.

Dogged By Ill Fate — Following the Nazi surrender in 1945, the President made an official trip to Moscow as commander of the victorious allied forces in eastern Europe. Zhukov acted as his host, and the President invited him to the U.S.

But a few months later Zhukov was abruptly exiled to a minor military post in a remote Russian province. His great popularity with the Russian people as a leading war hero had aroused the jealousy of the late Joseph Stalin, and he was banished to Siberia.

That's where he remained until recalled by Khrushchev who urgently needed Zhukov's high standing with the Red army to wrest control from other would-be Stalin successors, notably secret police czar Lavrenti Beria who was shot for "treason."

From then on Marshal Zhukov again rose to high favor and place.

In 1956, he once more saved Khrushchev from the ax. Zhukov backed him with the Red army when he was out-voted in a fierce showdown in the Presidium of the Communist Party's Central Committee. With this powerful military support, Khrushchev rode out that storm, which involved his erstwhile friend then Premier Bulganin.

In reward for this vital help, Zhukov was made Defense Minister and a full member of the Presidium, the first professional soldier to attain a place on this ruling body.

But within months, he was stripped of all his offices and "permanently retired" to a Ukrainian village — where he still lives.

This blitz ouster was carefully arranged while Zhukov was making an official visit to Yugoslavia as the guest of Marshal Tito. When Zhukov, loaded with gifts, decorations and acclaim, flew back to Moscow, he was notified at the airport that he was through.

His successor is Marshal Rodion Malinovsky, one of the three Red Army chiefs who did this hatcheting for Khrushchev. The others are Marshal Ivan Stepanovich Konev and Marshal Vasilii Sokolovsky, who also commanded armies in World War II.

Who'll Succeed Him — President de Gaulle, during his Washington visit, told President Eisenhower that Khrushchev has named a "committee" to pick his successor. De Gaulle said he got this information from Khrushchev. Also that this group is headed by Deputy Premier Mikoyan. In de Gaulle's opinion, most likely Khrushchev's successor is Deputy Premier Frol Kozlov, who came to the U.S. last year preceding Khrushchev's trip.

Premier Fidel Castro is going to visit "good friend" President Nasser in June. That's the latest inside word from both Havana and Cairo. Nasser is supplying Castro with Soviet bloc Egyptian cotton in exchange for sugar.

President Ricardo Arias is considered the most likely winner in Panama's May 8 election. That's what the State Department has told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Also according to the State Department the election will be "reasonably orderly," despite reports of impending violence and student "revolt."

Arias is generally friendly to the U.S., but is demanding a bigger percentage of Panama Canal tolls. He contends the money is needed to pay higher Panamanian salaries, which he is promising in his election campaign.

A group of Chilean educators, headed by Dr. Juan Gomez Mila, rector of the University of Chile, is touring Red China. Mila is also an official of the Federation of Latin American Universities.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Last night was one of the nights I felt like an orphan. The boys were out with their dogs in the lengthening shadows that made each grass blade stand distinct. The robins were chirping among the apple blossoms.

The AAUW was having roast chicken, parfait and Leonard Kranendonk — the hotel show was going on full blast and Mac was bringing back souvenirs — the Lutheran Women were having a program on Africa and little old Cinderella here was chained to the typewriter.

It wouldn't have been so bad if there had been room for all the good stories I had. It's as frustrating as being a gossip with a hot item who discovers her phone is out of order.

Passing on my frustration to you, you'll have to wait to find out what the Tannersville ULCW is going to do with all those detergent bottle caps; what those mysterious parcels are that will be smuggled into the YMCA on Wednesday;

Who is engaged to whom; what surprise is in store for Mr. Whittaker; retiring custodian at the Bushkill school; what a buddy burner is; when a pump organ comes in handy; and the problems of a family with more than one 4-H Club member and only one horse or pony.

Me and Dr. Joyce Brothers! Which reminds me that the psychiatrist will probably get a lot of new customers if the vote in East Stroudsburg's first ward is thrown out. Neighbors with opposing viewpoints were just getting back to the point of borrowing the fertilizer spreader again.

I sort of missed the Letters to the Editor, though.

International Friendship Shows Signs Of Rekindling Uncertainty

By Tony Cesare

AN INTERNATIONAL friendship shows signs of rekindling now after being shrouded in uncertainty for several years.

The companionship, involving an East Stroudsburg State College instructor and a former high-ranking Iraqi official, was entangled in political mystery several years ago when the Iraqi was suddenly imprisoned for purposes labeled as "treasonous" by his government.

But today the anxiety and worry surrounding the relationship are gone and there is a state of happiness as good news trickles out of strife-weary Iraq.

The ESSC instructor is Marvin Burrus, who for the past ten years has taught mathematics at the college, but has also kept abreast of developments inside the Arabian country of Iraq. What he had hoped for so many years was revealed recently, when his good friend and Columbia University colleague, Dr. Fadhl Jamali, was reported alive.

Dr. Jamali, internationally-known official, former Iraq prime minister, and one-time delegate to the United Nations, and Burrus were students together at Columbia University and developed a close friendship.

While at Columbia University, Dr. Jamali made several visits to the Poconos in the early 1930's as a direct result of the companionship. Dr. Jamali was also a guest speaker at ESSC and on one occasion studied the educational system at ESSC.

News Story

The following is a news story that appeared recently in the New York World-Telegram and The Sun which shed some light on the long awaited turning point of events:

"It is good news on two scores that Iraq's Premier Kassem has commuted the death sentence of Fadhl Jamali, his country's more famous statesman and perhaps the West's best friend among Arab nations.

"For one thing, the clemency is further evidence that the Kassem government is growing still more independent of Communist influence, exerted both from Moscow and from within Iraq.

"More importantly, it is an indication that Kassem is not wholly oblivious to American reaction to some of his more headstrong acts.

"Jamali now faces only a 10-year prison term. We can hope that, in further evidence of Iraq's return to common sense and stability, the ruling premier will see fit to free this statesman at the earliest."

The close relationship of the two men first appeared in jeopardy when Dr. Jamali was condemned to death in December 1958 by a military court.

The government then gave indications of being under Communist influence. The outspoken official had allegedly "insulted" Col. Abdel Nasser, of Egypt and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. Without restraint, Dr. Jamali warned his fellow Arabs and fellow Moslems that Nasser and Khrushchev were both false prophets.

The fate of Dr. Jamali had been unknown up until this latest news of his commuted sentence.

Burrus, who resides at 400 Normal Street, East Stroudsburg, with his wife and two children, first learned of the situation while reading an October 1958 issue of Life magazine. Under an editorial entitled: "Ritual Murder in Iraq," Burrus recognized his former classmate as the man sentenced to die.

"It is difficult to describe the feeling I got when first learning of the tragedy," said Burrus. "I was stunned, to say the least," he continued.

Good Man

"Dr. Jamali, I recall, was always a good man. The crux of the situation is the same old story of Communist-inspired manifestations," Burrus commented.

The editorial in Life said in part:

"In Iraq . . . a man named Fadhl Jamali was condemned to death by a military court. Dr. Jamali is a distinguished teacher, he worked unsparingly to give Iraq a modern education system."

Burrus agreed with this but could do nothing. Slowly his mind wandered to the initial meeting of the two men when they were taking post-graduate courses at Columbia University in 1931.

It was at that time that Jamali gave Burrus permission to occupy his room at International House while Jamali was touring the U.S. Said Burrus: "It was rather hot and stuffy that summer while I was completing my studies and I felt very fortunate. International House had an air conditioning system and it was very comfortable there."

From that time to 1958 Dr. Jamali served his country as a delegate. Then came the overthrow of the Nuri al-Said government. Most of the Iraqi officials with Western ideals were in the midst of trouble. Dr. Jamali, an American-educated diplomat, was one of them.

Burrus immediately sought additional information regarding his old friend. He contacted the consulate general of Iraq in New York City. The consulate informed him at that time that "the death sentence had been held up." That was all they knew. That was all Burrus knew—until now.

The latter award is considered a very high honor in the fact the contestants select this winner rather than the official judges whose decision is final in the choice of "Miss Pocono 1960."

Wedding Bid

Then again in 1933, the college tutor received a wedding invitation to attend the marriage ceremony of Dr. Jamali and a Canadian girl by the name of Sarah Hayden Powell. The marriage took place in Baghdad, but Burrus apologetically said he could not attend.

There was a long silence from that year until the middle 1940's when Burrus read with interest that his former classmate had now become the Iraqi delegate to the United Nations in New York.

From that time to 1958 Dr. Jamali served his country as a delegate. Then came the overthrow of the Nuri al-Said government. Most of the Iraqi officials with Western ideals were in the midst of trouble. Dr. Jamali, an American-educated diplomat, was one of them.
